

Annual Field Day

Annual Livestock Show
Maine Livestock Breeders Will Meet
August 4th at Rumford

The Maine Livestock Breeders will hold their ninth annual field day Saturday, August 4, at the farm of E. C. and H. C. Frost in Rumford, according to the announcement made by Richard F. Tupper, Secretary of the Maine Livestock Breeders' Association and Extension Day Specialist.

In making this announcement Tupper pointed out the fact that each year the field day is held in a different section of the State in order that different breeders may have a good opportunity to attend the field day at least once every two or three years, but many attend every year regardless of the distance which they may travel. This is the first time that the field day has been held in this particular section of Maine. The last one was at Sawyer's farm in Gorham.

On the father and son are kept twenty-five head of purebred Guernseys. Of particular significance is the fact that this species of herd has been built up every year for five years. "For no longer time ago than 1928 there were but two purebred cattle in the herd.

Some of the cows of the show type as well as utility. The show type has been represented in the show ring at many of the past two years. Most of the milk produced by this herd is made into butter which is sold in Rumford.

On the same farm there is a large dairy herd and a home made state milk. It is located about two miles from Rumford Falls. The program is rapidly being run into shape.

Annual Field Day

Maine Livestock Breeders Will Meet August 4th at Rumford

The Maine Livestock Breeders will hold their ninth annual field day at the farm of E. C. and H. C. Frost in Rumford, according to an announcement made by Richard F. Talbot, secretary of the Maine Livestock Breeders' Association and Extension Dairy Specialist.

In making this announcement Talbot pointed out the fact that each year the field day is held in a different section of the state in order that different breeds of stock may have a good opportunity to attend a day of at least once every two or three years but many attend every year regardless of the distance which they must travel. This is the first time in this particular section of Maine. The last one was at Sawyer's farm in Greene.

On this farm which is operated by Walter and son, are kept two hundred and fifty head of cattle. Of particular interest is the fact that this splendid herd has been built up during the last few years. For no longer time ago than now there were but two purebred cattle on the farm.

Some of the cows are of a show type as well as utility. The farm has been represented in the show ring at many places in the past two years. Most of the stock owned by this herd is made into butter which is sold in Rumford.

On the farm there is practically a new barn and a home made dairy silo. It is about two miles from Rumford and the program is rapidly being put into effect.

HUNT'S CORNER AND VICINITY

Hilltop Meeting Sunday

The rain of Sunday afternoon which prevented the Sunset meeting on the shore of Songo Lake, was a disappointment to many as all were anxious to hear Mr. Jessup and his message from the Near East.

We are looking forward to Sunday, July 29, as a Hilltop service will be held at 10:30 Standard Time on the Hill in front of Abel Andrews house, about a five minutes walk, and for those who do not feel equal to the climb, a hay rack with good steady horses will convey them to the place of meeting.

All those who have heard Henry Merrill and his class of men, will want to hear them again. Mrs. Ives expects to be with us. Her presence always inspires the spirit of good fellowship. The place is spacious and everyone is cordially invited to the service, also to bring their lunch and cup as coffee will be served by the Albany people to everyone.

Old Book Room Treasures

(No. 2)
By C. F. Whitman

The late Judge Herrick C. Davis, was a poet. The other day I came across a treasure in his handwriting. This is a copy of it.

To the Old Elm House Piazza
Where fathers their bad headed stories told
The young crowd of youth and old
Who open the tales that books address,
Who shout and cheer and sing and laugh,
Who crowd the benches and the lawn,
To avoid the draft and shoulder a gun,
For cooling shade they shall no more know,
For wind hands have laid them low.

In a sketch of Sylvanus Cobb Jr.'s, life in Norway, it is related that he with lawyer Wm. Wirt Virgin, afterwards a judge of the Supreme Court of Maine, sang hymns in the choir of the Universalist church. Cobb was an artist and often sketched "the pulpit and pews". Some of them are very grotesque. "The minister was Rev. Mr. F. W. Ford, who was well liked and some of the attitudes he would strike were very ludicrous." It was a great curiosity to ascertain who this "Rev. Mr. F. W. Ford" was. He was evidently Rev. J. W. Ford, who was pastor of the Universalist Society here three years from 1854 to 1858. Where he came from or where he went to is unknown to the writer. He left no lasting impression upon the Society or the town. He was succeeded by Rev. Joseph C. Snow, one of the most popular and ablest preachers the society has ever had.

Rev. J. W. Virgin was also something of an artist. The writer found among the papers in the Clerk of Courts office, the notes taken in a trial before him. That was prior to the time when stenographers took down the testimony of witnesses and the charge of the presiding judge in shorthand. In this notebook were pencil sketches of some of the witnesses, lawyers, etc. I doubt if Cobb was a better characterist than Virgin.

When Doctor Asa Danforth came as a young man to Norway, he brought with him the following recommendation of Doctor Stephen Cummings to William Reed, the Postmaster of the village and one of the principal citizens:

"Portland, Sept. 20th, 1820, William Reed, Esq., Norway, Dear Sir: Doctor Asa Danforth the bearer of this, travels in your part of the country, for the purpose of physic. Perhaps you might think it an object for him to tarry in Norway. Doctor Danforth is a gentleman of the first responsibility, has gone through a regular course of study with one of the ablest physicians and has passed an examination before the medical society in Boston, and no doubt would be a very careful man in the profession. Your attention to him will confer a great favor on your friend and Serv't, Stephen Cummings."

Recently Mr. Reed did think it an object for the young physician to tarry in Norway, for his daughter Abigail, fell in love with him and became his wife. They had a family of eight children and some of their descendants live in the town of Norway to this very day. The Doctor taught some fifty years of practice here and in the vicinity, won the hearts of the people as no other physician has ever. He died in his 84th year, greatly lamented by everybody.

And who was Dr. Stephen Cummings? He was the son of Jonathan Cummings, a Man of the Revolution, who was the proprietor of the Cummings tract, and in what is now Center Norway, and extended northward to the Green Mountains line. Doctor Stephen Cummings was born in Andover, Mass., Jan. 1, 1782. He married Eleanor Hale and came to Waterford where he was clerk of the proprietors of the township and was one of the town's principal officers. He moved to Portland, where he became known as a physician and surgeon. He died at Cape Elizabeth in 1854. In the time of the Railroad, to determine whether Portland or Boston should be its terminus, from Montreal, Ore. and Boston in Norway, one of the three candidates to ride over the proposed route, made his first lap from Portland to Brown's Hotel in Gray, a distance of sixteen miles with Dr. Stephen Cummings' old racking mare in fifty-five minutes. This was the fastest time made by any of the horses on the whole line. Dr. Stephen Cummings had a son, Stephen, who married a daughter of Dr. Wm. C. Whitney and settled in Norway. There has been a Stephen Cummings in every generation of the old "Cummings" descendants, to the son of Dr. Stephen B. Cummings.
